

Hydrogen bond is a kind of chemical bond that is realized by a donor-acceptor mechanism between two covalently bound atoms with high electronegativity through the hydrogen atom N.

The presence of hydrogen bonds is explained by the high boiling point of acetic acid.

With the help of hydrogen bond, two molecules of acetic acid are coupled with the formation of a cyclic structure.