

Answer on Question #52654 – Math – Algebra

Scientists are studying the temperature on a distant planet. They find that the surface temperature at one location is 25°Celsius. They also find that the temperature decreases by 3° Celsius for each kilometer you go up from the surface.

Solution

$$T = 25 - 3d,$$

where T is the temperature in degrees Celsius and d is the distance from the surface.