

Answer on Question #63739 – Math – Statistics and Probability

Question

A researcher wants to compare users of marijuana to users of crack cocaine to see if they differ in whether they are referred to drug courts after arrest. What type of statistical test should be used to conduct this analysis?

Answer

A chi-square test for independence should be used to conduct this analysis.